

A Peek into the Future

Heather Lulow and Stacey Lulow are both mothers and understand the excitement a new child brings to one's family. They are the owners of the new 4D Peek, where the latest sonographic technology allows expectant parents to peek images of their unborn child.

4D Peek offers parents a chance of a lifetime. Until now expectant parents could not see their baby's face until he or she was born. They could only see flat, black and white images of their unborn child through a traditional 2D ultrasound at the doctors' office.

But now using state-of-the-art equipment, an unintrusive ultrasound is done over the mother's stomach and you can watch your baby in 3D/4D. 3D is a three dimensional still image of the baby and 4D allows you to see the baby live. Watch the baby move, observe their cherub face and examine their tiny hands and feet. It is amazing!

4D Peek provides a private, relaxed atmosphere for your intimate experience. 4D Peek starts the appointment by looking at the baby in the traditional 2D form. Once the baby is in a good position to be seen, the baby then can be viewed in 3D/4D. Parents can take their time to view their unborn baby for the first time and watch the baby in action on a flat screen TV.

4D Peek invites you to take a peek into the future.

This ultrasound is the same machine used by doctors and is not harmful to the baby.

This is an opportunity for parents to bond with their unborn baby and a chance for younger siblings to become involved with the pregnancy.

Together, everyone watches what could never be seen before. Together everyone sees the unborn child for the first time. And this experience is shared and recorded for all time.

One past client, Kim Langan, described her experience as "magical."
